

MEET TURNER

“You want a lawyer who enjoys the law. I read law for fun.”
 — Turner Falk

Turner focuses his practice on bankruptcy and business reorganizations. He represents lenders, creditors, real estate developers, investors, individuals and private clients, and nonprofit organizations in restructurings, foreclosures and bankruptcies. He always tries to find alternative and creative ways to get his clients where they want to be.

As the first lawyer in a family of small business owners, Turner has observed how legal or financial difficulties can be make-or-break for the business, the owners and their families. His goal is to ensure that his clients have clear guidance and aggressive advocacy so they can resolve their legal issues in a durable way and continue to operate. To accomplish this, Turner first determines the client’s objectives, and then he charts a strategy to reach those goals, whether via litigation or negotiation.

When not working, Turner enjoys walking in nature, riding bikes and reading pulp science fiction books.

EXPERIENCE

Prior to joining Obermayer, Turner worked extensively with a legal services nonprofit organization, representing clients pro bono and preventing evictions, reducing small businesses’ tax liability, and helping them stay tax compliant.

Turner also served as a law clerk at United States Bankruptcy Court, where he researched and wrote published opinions on bankruptcy and related law. Prior to that, he served as a law clerk in the Philadelphia Family Court, Dependency Division, where he sat as a hearing officer and decided over two hundred cases regarding families in the foster care system.
